Machu Picchu Full Day by 360° Train

the valley in the open air, with an observation car and a slow afternoon

DURATION	DIFFICULTY	MAX. ALTITUDE	BEST SEASON
Full day	Easy	2,430 m	Apr — Oct

If the train ride is part of the adventure for you, not just a way to get there, this is the tour you're looking for. Inca Rail's 360° train has panoramic windows that curve up toward the roof and, best of all, an open observation car where you can step outside, feel the breeze of the Urubamba canyon, hear the river and photograph the mountains with no glass in the way. We leave Cusco at a more reasonable hour than on other full-day tours: the train departs Ollantaytambo at 7:22 am, so there's no need to wake up at three in the morning. You reach Aguas Calientes, ride the bus up to the citadel and explore it with a professional guide for about 2.5 hours, in a small group of no more than 12 people. What really sets this tour apart is the afternoon. You return on the 7:00 pm Voyager train, which leaves you several free hours in Aguas Calientes to enjoy a relaxed lunch, visit the site…
