Sacred Valley of the Incas Full Day

terraces, salt and Inca stone in a single day

DURATION	DIFFICULTY	MAX. ALTITUDE	BEST SEASON
Full day	Easy	3,760 m	All year

The Sacred Valley was the farming heartland of the Inca Empire: a fertile valley along the Urubamba River, lined with mountains, terraces and villages that still live off the land and the loom. This full-day tour brings its most representative sites together in one day, from the highlands of Chinchero down to the valley floor. We start in Chinchero, with its colonial church built on Inca walls and a traditional weaving demonstration. Then we visit Moray, the circular terraces that worked as an agricultural laboratory, and the Maras Salt Mines, thousands of salt pools worked by local families for centuries. After a buffet lunch in Urubamba we explore Ollantaytambo, a still-inhabited Inca town with an imposing temple, and finish at the archaeological park of Pisac. It is a long day, but with short walks and at a lower altitude than Cusco: ideal for acclimatizing in your first days and for…
